Bipartisan Index

The Lugar Center and Georgetown University's McCourt School of Public Policy have produced a non-partisan ranking of how often each Member of Congress works across party lines.

Read about the Bipartisan Index in the Roll Call op-ed "Reviving the Lost Art of Bipartisanship" and The Hill op-eds "Real conservatives and real progressives can get things done" and "Bipartisanship in Congress: Some progress, still a long way to go" by former Senator Richard Lugar and Georgetown University's McCourt School of Public Policy Dean Edward Montgomery.

Senator Lugar's Introduction to the Bipartisan Index

The Bipartisan Index is intended to fill a hole in the information available to the public about the performance of Members of Congress. There are innumerable studies, rankings, and indexes that grade members according to a partisan, parochial, or special-interest standard.

We sought to develop an objective measure of how well members of opposite parties work with one another using bill sponsorship and co-sponsorship data. We gravitated toward bill sponsorships and co-sponsorships for two reasons. First, they allowed us to construct a highly objective measure of partisan and bipartisan behavior. Second, sponsorship and co-sponsorship behavior is especially revealing of partisan tendencies. Members' voting decisions are often contextual and can be influenced by parliamentary circumstances. Sponsorships and co-sponsorships, in contrast, exist as very carefully considered declarations of where a legislator stands on an issue.

The Bipartisan Index measures the frequency with which a Member co-sponsors a bill introduced by the opposite party and the frequency with which a Member's own bills attract co-sponsors from the opposite party.
Bipartisan Index

It is essential to understand that one cannot get a clear and fair picture simply by tallying up bipartisan sponsorships and co-sponsorships in a single Congress. The main problem is that behavior related to sponsoring and co-sponsoring bills differs greatly depending on whether a member is in the majority or minority. To overcome this problem and give our index greater historical value, we constructed a 20-year baseline of data to which majority and minority members could be compared. One also must make decisions about how to compare members who co-sponsor a lot of bills with those who co-sponsor only a few; whether and how to give credit for an increasing number of bipartisan co-sponsors on a bill; whether to include commemorative legislation and resolutions; and how to handle members who introduce a very small number of bills or none at all. We tested solutions to each of these questions and others before settling on what we believe is an effective formula for measuring bipartisanship.

I would emphasize that we do not believe that it is wrong for members to have partisan bills in their portfolio of co-sponsorships. Every member of Congress has such bills. Nor do we believe that all bipartisan bills are wisely written and considered. However, a consistently low score on this index will be a very strong indication that a legislator is viewing his or her duties through a partisan lens. Conversely, a consistently high score is a strong indication that a legislator is prioritizing problem solving and open to working with the other party when possible.

What we are measuring in this Index is not so much the quality of legislation but rather the efforts of legislators to broaden the appeal of their sponsored legislation, to entertain a wider range of ideas, and to prioritize governance over posturing.

With this in mind, we regard any score above zero as a good score. We designate Members who score above zero as “Bipartisan Legislators” because they are above average compared to the 20-year baseline scores for their respective group. But we also offer special commendation to those members who score in the very top ranks. For the 113th Congress, the top two Senate scores belong to Susan Collins of Maine and Joe Manchin of West Virginia. In the House, the two top scores were achieved by Christopher Gibson and Peter King, both of New York.

If a member is disappointed in his or her score, there is a straightforward way to improve it in future congresses: Put more effort into recruiting bipartisan co-sponsors for your bills and consider co-sponsoring bills introduced by the opposite party. We hope members will do that and we regard the Bipartisan Index as a way of providing encouragement.

Our focus with the Bipartisan Index is not just on individual members. We also are looking at how Congress as a whole is performing. We hear often from commentators who claim that we are experiencing an extraordinarily partisan era. Regrettably, our analysis bears this out to a large extent. You can see by the charts that the last three Congresses have yielded very low scores on the Bipartisan Index. The 112th and 113th Congresses had the two lowest scores among the eleven Congresses that we have analyzed so far.
What this means is that at the beginning of the legislative process, when effective governance would argue for broadening a new bill’s appeal, too often the opposite is happening. Bills are being written not to maximize their chances of passage, but to serve as legislative talking points. Taking a position is not the same thing as governing. For Congress to be successful, the parties must work together at the beginning of the legislative process.

The Founders of our Republic were realists who understood the power of factionalism, parochialism, and personal ambition. They understood that good intentions would not always prevail. Accordingly, they designed a system to check abuse and prevent power from accumulating in a few hands. But they knew that the efficient operation of such a Republic would require a great deal of cooperation. They knew that it would require most elected officials to have a dedication to governance, and they trusted that leaders would arise in every era to make their vision work.

In this spirit, we encourage members of Congress to more frequently open themselves to the possibility that colleagues from the opposite party may have good ideas that are deserving of consideration.

Media Coverage

What do new Bipartisan Index rankings say about the Ohio delegation? Senior Fellow at The Lugar Center discusses.
IdeaStream, WCPN, May 8, 2018

Susan Collins Tops 'Most Bipartisan' in Senate Lugar Index
Newsmax.com, May 5, 2018

Senator Lugar talks about the 2017 Bipartisan Index
POTUS Sirius XM Radio, May 3, 2018

Indiana's U.S. senators earn high marks for bipartisanship in Lugar Center analysis
Kokomo Perspective, May 1, 2018

Editorial: A lot more cooperation is needed in Congress
Wisconsin State Journal, April 29, 2018

A choice between GOP prosperity and Democratic obstruction
Concord Monitor, April 29, 2018

Delaware Valley-area GOP reps rate high in bipartisanship survey
WHYY, April 26, 2018

Who's the most bipartisan Ohioan in Congress? See how your member scored
Cleveland.com, April 25, 2018
Which Colorado members of Congress display the most bipartisanship?
The Gazette, April 25, 2018

Curbelo, Ros-Lehtinen rank among the most bipartisan members of Congress
Miami Herald, April 25, 2018

Collins ranked most bipartisan U.S. senator
WAGM/ CBS 8, April 24, 2018

Hell freezing over? Even in Trump age, some N.J. politicians are nice to the other party.
NJ.com, April 24, 2018

Massachusetts Weak In Congress Bipartisan Rankings (Watch 2:12)
WBZ CBS Boston, May 16, 2017

Partisan politics in the age of Trump? These N.J. Republicans work with Democrats
NJ.com, May 13, 2017

Red-State Dems May Reach Across Aisle Ahead of 2018
Real Clear Politics, May 11, 2017

The Lugar Center’s Director of Policy discusses the Bipartisan Index
The Texas Standard, May 8, 2017

Senator Lugar discusses the Bipartisan Index on Sirius XM’s POTUS “Midday Briefing” program
Sirius XM, April 27, 2017

Senate Republicans Became More Bipartisan in the Last Congress — Democrats, Not So Much
Roll Call, April 26, 2017

Does bipartisanship even work in today’s polarized Congress? Yes.

Meet the 5 most bipartisan politicians in Congress
The Christian Science Monitor, November 1, 2016

Moderates are squeezed out or pulled apart
Fort Wayne News-Sentinel, April 29, 2016

Terrorism a bipartisan concern
Leader-Telegram, March 27, 2016

Low scores for cooperation to Wisconsin’s congressional delegation

Lugar, Hamilton will discuss civility in American politics at USI
Evansville Courier & Press, March 18, 2016
Bridging the Gap

The Youngstown Vindicator, March 11, 2016

Fighting for the lost art of bipartisanship
The Indianapolis Star, March 10, 2016

Do Partisan Senators Make Better Presidential Candidates?
The Atlantic, March 8, 2016

Study Finds Sanders, Cruz to Be the Senate’s Most Partisan Members
The Fiscal Times, March 8, 2016

Senator Lugar discusses the Bipartisan Index on Sirius XM’s POTUS Politics
Sirius XM’s POTUS Politics, March 8, 2016

Bipartisanship in Congress: Some progress, still a long way to go
The Hill, March 7, 2016

Sanders, Cruz top list of most partisan senators
Politico, March 7, 2016

Two Presidential Hopefuls Rank as Least Bipartisan Senators
Roll Call, March 7, 2016

And the most partisan senator of 2015 is...

Indianapolis Star: Sen. Lugar’s ranking on the Bipartisan Index
The Indianapolis Star, January 6, 2016

Senator Lugar discusses the Bipartisan Index on C-SPAN’s Washington Journal
January 4, 2016

Senator Lugar discusses the Bipartisan Index on Sirius XM’s POTUS Politics
Sirius XM’s POTUS Politics, December 16, 2015

How Do We Know How Congress is Doing?

Real conservatives and real progressives can get things done
The Hill, December 15, 2015

Anarchy in the House
Bipartisan Index

Senator Lugar discusses the Iran nuclear deal and the Bipartisan Index with rtv6 in Indianapolis
rtv6 The INDY Channel, September 19, 2015

See which N.J. Republican congressmen cross party lines the most NJ.com, July 27, 2015

Sen. Lugar is out of office, but full of ideas
The Indianapolis Star, June 25, 2015

Lugar rates Donnelly, Kirk among best at bipartisanship
The Northwest Indiana Times, June 6, 2015

'Bipartisan' shouldn't be a dirty word for members of Congress
The Milwaukee Journal Sentinel, June 4, 2015

Why Can't Congress Just Get Along?
On Point with Tom Ashbrook, June 1, 2015

Capitol Cooperation
The Journal Gazette, May 31, 2015

How Bipartisan Are Our Politicians?
WBOC 16, May 29, 2015

The Detroit News covers the Bipartisan Index
The Detroit News, May 27, 2015

Senator Lugar discusses the Bipartisan Index on Sirius XM’s POTUS Politics
Sirius XM’s POTUS Politics, May 22, 2015

Bipartisanship studied in the age of gridlock
The Chicago Sun-Times, May 21, 2015

Ranking the Senate’s Would-Be Presidents by Partisanship
Bloomberg Politics, May 20, 2015

New analysis shows an increasingly partisan Congress
USA Today, May 19, 2015

Former Senator Unveils Bipartisan Measure of Congress

Lugar Center Index Ranks Lawmakers on Bipartisanship
Real Clear Politics, May 19, 2015

Congress growing more partisan, index shows
The Indianapolis Star, May 19, 2015
Bipartisan Index

Congressional Partisanship, Polarization Is Increasing, Report Says
Newsmax, May 19, 2015

Lugar Center study reveals a very partisan Indiana delegation
Howey Politics Indiana, May 19, 2015

Reviving the Lost Art of Bipartisanship
Roll Call, May 18, 2015

Events & Speeches

Is National Unity Possible? Achieving Political Cohesion in an Era of Group Demands, Media Fragmentation, and Individual Expression
Franklin College, October 13, 2016

TLC Experts

A Modest Proposal to Restore Bipartisanship to SOTU
Politico, January 12, 2016