Connie Veillette (1960-2019)

Connie Veillette was a founding member of The Lugar Center, co-leading its Global Food Security and Aid Effectiveness programs since 2013.

Connie brought three decades of experience working in the foreign policymaking environment in the House of Representatives, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and the Congressional Research Service. She was also the director of the Rethinking U.S. Foreign Assistance Program at the Center for Global Development. She served as a consultant to the Chicago Council on Global Affair’s work on food security and to the Aspen Institute’s Congressional Program. She was a member of the Modernizing Foreign Assistance Network and the AGree advisory board. She was an adjunct professor at George Washington University, where she also attained an MA in Latin American Studies and a Ph.D. in Political Science.

Click here to learn more about the life and work of Connie Veillette.

News

Proposed Cuts to Foreign Assistance Will Reverse Decade-Long Bipartisan Reform Effort
Modernizing Foreign Assistance Network, March 16, 2017

TLC Experts

Global Food Security in Facts and Figures
May 7, 2015

Hunger and Whole of Government
March 24, 2015
Blog Posts

Celebrating a Renewed Commitment to U.S. Leadership in Global Food Security
November 1, 2018

Working Toward Consensus on Aid Redesign and Reform
September 29, 2017

Six Principles for Prioritizing Foreign Assistance
March 30, 2017

Rethinking Feed the Future
December 14, 2015

What’s in a Label?
March 12, 2015

Agroforestry: Our Bet for Beating Hunger and Malnutrition
January 23, 2015

Feed the Future – If It’s Really Whole of Government, the Budget Should be Too
January 13, 2015

Climate Change, Science, and Global Agriculture
April 15, 2014

When 140 Characters Just Won’t Do: Senator Lugar’s Speech to CARE’s National Conference and International Women’s Day Celebration
March 7, 2014

Expectations for the President’s 2015 Budget
February 26, 2014